

ANOTHER CHARGE IS BROUGHT AGAINST ISOLATION HOSPITAL

BEING TREATED FOR THE MEASLES, JAMES FURLONG
CONTRACTED SMALLPOX WHILE THERE—WAS A
CASE OF WRONG DIAGNOSIS SAYS DR. WHITELAW.

A second charge of gross negligence and carelessness is laid at the door of those in authority at the isolation hospital and at this time it concerns a man named James Furlong, who contracted small-pox while in the measles ward. The complainant in this case claims that he caught the disease from a negro who was sent to the hospital by a physician who diagnosed his complaint as measles, but was in reality suffering from small-pox from which he subsequently died.

Furlong's case was a serious one and according to Dr. Whitelaw's statement at times his life was despaired of. As a result of his illness he was rendered exceedingly weak and was very much disfigured. If the city does not pay a reasonable sum in compensation to Mr. Furlong, the city will likely be sued. Enery, Newell, and Bolton are acting for the complainant.

The particulars of the case, as advanced by Enery, Newell and Bolton, on behalf of their client are clearly stated in a letter written by them to the city. The letter is as follows:

Lawyer's Letter.
Edmonton, Aug. 5, 1910,
Secretary-Treasurer City of Edmonton,
Municipal Offices:

Dear Sir—We have been consulted by James Furlong, of North Edmonton, who informs us that on the 6th of May last he had occasion to consult Dr. Smith, who found that he was suffering from measles and sent him to the isolation hospital, from where he was discharged on the 14th of that month and returned home, but within 48 hours felt so sick that he consulted Dr. Smith again, on the 17th, 22nd and again on the 24th, when Dr. Smith took him to see Dr. Whitelaw, who at once pronounced him to be suffering from small-pox, and upon leaving the circumstances, stated that, having regard to the time that it takes the latter disease to develop, Mr. Furlong must have become infected at the isolation hospital, where it appears he was in the same ward with a negro by the name of Adams, who he understood died from that disease.

Assuming, as we believe to be the case, that these statements are correct, then there would seem to be no doubt, but that there was gross negligence on the part of someone at the isolation hospital in placing Furlong in the same ward with the negro, Adams, and owing to which our client lay sick in the hospital until July 9th, when he was discharged, but is still much weak to work, and is most frightfully disfigured.

We shall feel obliged if you will lay this matter before the council in order that they may consider the case, when we have little doubt that upon an inquiry being ordered, it will be found that the statements made by Furlong are correct and that the case is therefore one in which compensation should be paid to our client, for his loss of time, the payments he has made out of his own pocket for the loss he has had to pay Dr. Smith and for the sufferings he has endured, and trusting to hear from you shortly that the council agree with this view, we are,

Yours truly,
EMERY, NEWELL & BOLTON.
Dr. Whitelaw's Statement

When seen by The Capital this morning, Dr. Whitelaw, medical health officer, issued the following statement:

1.—James Furlong contracted small-pox from a patient who was sent to the isolation hospital, with a disease diagnosed as measles, by one of the local physicians, and who was treated there by the doctor in question until the man died on May 6th. The city cannot assume the responsibility for mistakes in diagnosis by physicians.

It must, however, be recognized that it is occasionally possible for even the most careful and conscientious physician to be mistaken in a case where an accurate diagnosis is difficult or impossible.

2.—Furlong was on the best of care and attention by the health officer during his whole illness and was supplied with medical attention, also nursing, food, and medicine, absolutely free. Instead of suing the city for damages, he ought to thank the city for saving his life, which was at times despaired of. Had he had the good sense to have been vaccinated at some period in his life, he would either have escaped altogether or would have had the disease in a very mild form.

STATISTICS SHOW METHODIST GAINS

During the Last Year Net Increase in Membership Was Over Five Thousand

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 15.—Following are some interesting statistics relating to the census of Canadian Methodism as compared with last quadrennium. Statistics are not generally popular. It is not every one that can speak or write about them as attractively as Gladstone, yet safe business principles demand figures as a test of progress or prosperity.

The membership by conferences is as follows:

Conference.	Members.
Toronto	58,502
London	50,623
Hamilton	52,488
Bay of Quinte	40,876
Montreal	38,724
Nova Scotia	16,184
N. B. and P. E. I.	14,487
Newfoundland	13,504
Manitoba	12,980
Saskatchewan	15,338
Alberta	10,650
British Columbia	9,800
West China Mission	1,625
Total	340,001

Total 1910 was 340,001.

The membership of the united conferences in 1883 was 160,843. In the 27 years the increase, therefore, amounts to 179,288—a very substantial increase for the 27 years.

During the past year the whole church received 42,816 members, 18,129 of them "by letter." Removals accounted for an offset of 37,362, so that the net increase for 1909-10 was 5,454.

Gen. H. Cornish, D.D., of Toronto, is the general conference statistician. He is also the author of "Cyclopedia of Methodism in Canada," a work which will account for every minister in the church where he has been and now is.

As he left the house, disappointed and sore, he encountered his henchman, Steven Anderson, and on explaining the case to him, the two set out in search for the couple.

On Fraser Avenue their search bore fruit. In the distance did they spy Joseph and the maiden approaching arm in arm, and blissfully unconscious of anything except what remained to themselves.

With threats of a horrible reckoning, which would do credit to the Spanish Inquisition, Mike drew his partner within the shade of a building and raised his umbrella. Finally Joseph and the young lady drew near enough for Mike to begin the attack.

With a bound he was beside the couple, Anderson right behind him. With his umbrella he smote his rival several nasty blows. Joseph grasped with him, and the fight was on. During the melee, Anderson and the girl walked off, unnoticed by the competitors.

The whole case was aired in the police court this morning, Phillips and Anderson being charged with assault. The case was adjourned until tomorrow morning.

The charge of assault against "Papa" Zimmerman laid by his wife has been withdrawn with costs.

Two drunks were assessed $4 and $5 costs or ten days.

New York Police Working on Case—Mayor Gaynor Will Soon Be Convalescent

New York, Aug. 15.—Mayor Gaynor showed further improvement and strength today and his seventh day found him rapidly emerging from the danger zone.

The early morning bulletin of the physicians showed the excellent progress he had made in the last 24 hours.

The first official bulletin issued at 8 o'clock was as follows:

"Mayor Gaynor has passed a good night and slept well. He has taken nourishment well and is in a good general condition this morning. Temperature 99.45, pulse 70, and respiration 16."

The police are engaging themselves in a theory that James Gallagher, the assassin of Mayor Gaynor, may have an accomplice. This Gallagher denies, but a man with a police record is under suspicion. Mayor Gaynor will be taken to the Adirondacks just as soon as his condition permits, but whether he will undergo the operation to remove the bullet before his trip to the mountains has not been fully determined.

"One more day and we will be able to tell Mayor Gaynor a convalescent," is the statement at St. Mary's Hospital in Hoboken today. His attendants were frankly cheerful and more optimistic than on any previous occasion.

Fortunately, the most priceless art relics, which had been loaned to the exposition or acquired by it, including the great valuable Gobelin tapestries, a large exhibition of jewelry, many paintings, marbles and ancient furniture were successfully removed by the police, firemen and exposition employees, beyond the reach of the flames and of pillaging criminals, who sought to take advantage of the disaster. The production of the house of Rubens, at Antwerp, and the official pavilion of the city of Antwerp, containing masterpieces of Flemish art, was not even scorched by the flames. In the British and Belgian sections the flames spread with such extraordinary rapidity that nothing was saved except the plan of the coming international exposition at Paris, in 1912.

A strong gale carried the fire through the Kermesse, crowded with Sunday visitors and it is considered a miracle that the panic-stricken masses escaped with a loss no greater than two killed and thirty injured.

British Losses Heavy

The British loss is very heavy. It includes the Tudor paneling from the Toronto Museum, costly Morlax tapestries, and priceless furniture from the collections of Bernard More, on which he refused to set any price. They were insured for $50,000.

Most of the French dealers' exhibits, which were insured for millions, were saved. A few wild beasts in the menagerie narrowly escaped suffocation in the flames, which drove back the firemen.

MONDAY, AUG. 15, 1910.

The correspondent of the Toronto Globe describes Edmonton's welcome to Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the morning of Tuesday last as the most impressive scene in the history of the Premier's tour. This is quite in line with the opinions expressed by practically every member of the party while in the city, and there could be no doubting their sincerity. The effort that was made to prepare a fitting welcome was in no way misplaced. The position that Edmonton today occupies in the eyes of the world is in no small measure, due to the manner in which it has seized such opportunities in the past. The Globe's representative goes on to observe that the Premier visited Edmonton on the occasion of the formation of the province five years ago, and saw a little scrappy town with unpaved streets and wooden buildings. Last night he saw a city of beautiful avenues and crowded metropolitan thoroughfares. Five years ago a modest five thousand people greeted him. Last night five thousand citizens welcomed him at the station and ten thousand more lined the route of the carriage which brought him through the streets.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, who visited Edmonton on Saturday, is a man it will pay you to keep your eyes on, for he is bound to rise in the life and health are spared, to a high position in the affairs of this country. He has from the first been recognized as the heavyweight of the government, headed by Sir James Whitney in Ontario, occupying the post of provincial secretary and having in his hands the very important duty of administering the license law. Neither party has so many strong men in Dominion affairs that it can count on overlooking any large-sized possibilities that provincial politics has to offer, and it is recognized as only a matter of time before Mr. Hanna occupies a place on the front Conservative bench in the House of Commons. Naturally with this prospect held out to him, he is anxious to get acquainted with what is rapidly becoming the most important part of the Dominion. Hence his present trip through the West.

Commissioner Boutilier has suggested that as the bridge over the Grosz ravine could be made forty feet wide at a cost of $35,000, while the expenditure of $2,000 would give a road way of only twenty feet, it would be wise to raise the extra $10,000. It looks like good business to change the plans accordingly. Eventually a large traffic is bound to pass over the structure.

The officials of the Edmonton Exhibition Association are to be warmly congratulated on the progress which has been made with the work of getting the new buildings and grounds in shape. Two months ago it looked as if they had set for themselves an impossible task. But next week everything will be ready for the reception of the thousands of people and the crowds. Those Edmontonians who have not paid a visit to the park have a surprise in store for them when they visit it eight days hence.

Careful inquiry leads to the belief that there is no reason for the extreme pessimism which is being expressed in some quarters regarding Western crop conditions. The reports of the special correspondents sent out by the Winnipeg Free Press, who, certainly, in view of their forecasts in other years, are entitled to have their opinions received with respect, contain little to fill one with gloom. Some districts are bad, but taking the country as a whole, there is nothing approaching failure. Mr. W. J. White, inspector of Canadian immigration offices, who also ought to know what is talking about, arrived in Winnipeg after a four weeks' tour through the three provinces. He went over all the railway lines and travelled some 700 miles in automobile side-trips. Speaking to the Free Press he declared that there had been great improvement in crops everywhere in the last few weeks. Even in Southern Alberta the wheat crops sown on summer fallow are splendid. Having regard to the unusually good crops all over the northern part of the three provinces, and indeed the fairly good crops in all parts, except perhaps in one or two spots, and having regard to the greatly increased area under cultivation, this year, Mr. White does not hesitate in stating his opinion that the crop will not fall short of one hundred million bushels. There is nothing to grumble about in that.

What Others Say

HE DIED IN HIS PRIME
(Toronto Weekly Sun)

Death came last week to one of the most successful business men of Toronto. It came at a time that, for one with so magnificent a constitution, should have been the prime of life. The untimely ending was undoubtedly hastened by too close application to business. The long hours spent in an office in the midst of the city's most crowded centre did not mark the limit of the day's work; before coming down in the morning and after return home at night an active mind was always dealing with the problems presented by a great industrial enterprise. Even at night a pad was at the bedside on which ideas that arose during temporary wakefulness were dotted down. The candle was not only burnt at both ends, but in the middle as well. No wonder it went out so soon.

This case is not a singular one by any means. Few men who attain prominence in industrial or public life reach old age. Most of them go off before the sun is fairly past the meridian.

Young men on the farm, at the threshold of life, who hear of the successes attained in cities do not believe the story that in the majority of cases is paid for the same. There are no millionaires on the farm; but there is usually a competence, and a green old age in which to enjoy it, together with the comforts of real home life from the beginning to the end.

WATERTON LAKES AS A SUMMER RESORT

Howard Douglas, Superintendent of National Parks, while in Calgary said Southern Alberta is to have one of the best and most summer resorts in the West Waterton Lakes.

In describing the new resort, Mr. Douglas said that one-half of the lake, which is seventeen miles long, is on the American side, and that the Americans have been fixing up their shores for the last three years.

"This year we intend to do a little fixing ourselves," he said, "and already the government have sent out surveyors who will locate a town-site near the lake. The body of water is one of the finest in the west for canoeing, boating and fishing and the site is admirably adapted for a summer resort. As soon as the town-site is laid out, a branch of the Canadian Pacific will no doubt be built to Waterton, and this will insure the success of the scheme—Magrath Pioneer.

Hazing Him.
"Mr. Chairman," said the new member of the literary club, "I move you, sir."
"I rise to a point of order, Mr. Chairman," interrupted one of the other members.
"State your point of order."

"The gentleman says 'I move you.' It is not only out of order, but utterly absurd for a man of 114 pounds to talk of 'moving' a chairman who weighs 300."
"The point is well taken," roared the presiding officer, bringing his gavel down with a resounding thud. "The gentleman will merely 'move' or 'take his seat.'"—Chicago Tribune.

Lady Mountaineer's Harrowing Experience on Alpine Climb

Another terrible mountain tragedy's reported from the French Alps. M. Fortune Allmand, a manufacturer of Rives, near Grenoble, and a lady friend of his, Mme. Baronnat, who went for an excursion in the neighboring mountains a part of the Alps known as the Grand Chartreuse, and who had since been missing, were found in a ravine where they had remained for over one hundred hours.

While endeavoring to take a short cut down the mountain, they slipped and from a height of about 30 feet rolled down the slippery slope of a small cascade. They managed, however, to extricate themselves, and reach one side of the torrent, but unfortunately M. Allmand had fractured his leg and suffered terrible pain from the injury.

"And there we were," said Mme. Baronnat, in a fainting voice, "unable to move or climb up the rocks again, imprisoned in a sort of huge funnel, which we realized at once was for us a living tomb. One cannot imagine the dreadful anguish and moral and physical pain. Four days and nights without food, and my poor friend suffered terribly from his leg. "After about 48 hours of agony," said Mme. Baronnat, "during which the only noise we heard was that of the torrent. I took a resolution. 'You know, my friend,' I said to M. Allmand, 'that we are done. There is no hope. Let us put an end to our sufferings.' We have simply to slip down into the water! I had hardly finished the sentence when my friend, who was very bad indeed, and looked like a phantom, stopped me, and with an effort raised himself from the rock where he was lying.

"No," he said, 'I am going to live to the end. I suffer! all a human being can suffer, but I shall not commit suicide.'

"On the third morning," said the lady, who was compelled to stop several times, owing to her feeble condition, "the poor fellow died, after having lost consciousness. From the moment I was left alone I became terrified. I had had nothing to eat for three days. I was fainting, and was feeling that my courage was empty, too. The solitude, that body-dead, in a word frightened me. I was feeling that my turn was approaching. Over a day and a night I had remained near the corpse, waiting for death, when I heard some sounds and a noise on my right. I thought it was a dream. I was then so feeble that I remember very little about my rescue.

BUY SCHOOL SITES

School Board Following their Far-Sighted Policy—A Lesson to C. Y.

In accordance with the policy of the school board in acquiring sites on which schools could be erected in the future, twenty-four lots in block 24, river lot 14, bounded by McCanney and Heimick, have been purchased on behalf of the board at a cost of $38,000. The lots are nos. 9 to 20, and 29 to 40. McLennan Bros. engineered the traffic.

The purchase of this property does not signify that a third school in the east end will be built in the near future, although the congestion in the Alexander Taylor and Norwood schools can stand a lot of relieving. The population in the district where the property has been purchased, however, is not thick enough to warrant the building of a school at this time.

WHAT SOME VISITORS THINK OF EDMONTON

Liter of Colliers

Mr. H. P. Gadsby, editor of Canadian Colliers, is a visitor in Edmonton, in his return trip to the east, he having just been to the coast. While there he travelled to Prince Rupert via the G. T. P. steamship service. "This city's beautiful location is the first thing that impressed me," said Mr. Gadsby in the course of an interview. "It is delightful to the traveler, who, weary of travelling mile after mile over the open prairie, to again see the trees and the lakes and the rivers, and the park-like rolling country."

"Then, too, there is a solidity and permanency about the class of the building that is being erected here that impresses one."

Speaking about Prince Rupert, Mr. Gadsby prophesied a splendid future for the new town. Not only will the trade that G. T. P. will direct to the Orient, have its effect, but there are local industries about Prince Rupert that will do its share in building up the place. He says that the islands in the vicinity of Prince Rupert are well mineralized, and also that the fishing industry is going to be immensely valuable.

Mr. Gadsby believes that British Columbia will furnish a market for a great many of Alberta's products. He pointed out that northern Alberta especially would find a market for its products in the coast province. Owing to the fact that this is such a good country for mixed farming, and that B. C. is so excellent for other things, Mr. Gadsby thinks that there must be some sort of reciprocity arranged between the two. British Columbia will supply the fruit for the prairie provinces, while here in Alberta there are things which British Columbia finds it impossible to produce.

"I believe that you will see the Canadian Northern establish Pacific terminals on the Portland Canal at Stewart, or some other point within the next few years," said Mr. Gadsby. He said that they would probably build through the Pine Pass, and that the Canadian Pacific will be almost certain to find a northern coast port. Mr. Gadsby stated that the latter road will soon be doing something to offset the advantages gained by the G. T. P. in having a short route and low grade to the coast.

A Brantford Man

"If I were to go back to Brantford and tell them what I have seen in this city they absolutely would not believe me."

This is the opinion of Mr. H. Mullins of Brantford, who is in the city on his first visit to the west. "You have the country," he went on, "and you have a very beautiful city. Why! Wherever I went in the train the other morning and looked out of the window I thought I was in Ontario, with the fine fields of grain and the trees, so different from the open prairie."

Mr. Mullins, who is in the dairy business, is thinking of locating here. "I might come up next spring," he said, "if, if the women folks will let me. The hard thing is to get the women to come west. I know, they don't like to leave the east. However, Edmonton looks as if it would be a fine district for dairy produce, with an unlimited supply."

Mr. Mullins then remembered that he had spent some time in Saskatchewan and that he thought it would be one of the coming cities, but that he did not like it so well as Edmonton, where the possibilities were much greater. Mr. Mullins will return east shortly but will come back to Edmonton in the spring of next year.

CIVIC AFFAIRS

It has been decided by the commissioners that at the close of the present season there will be no more free advertising allowed on the exterior of electric cars. Owing to the fact that the city has an arrangement with the baseball club the regulations governing the matter will not come into force until next year. If any of the charitable or benefit institutions in the city then wish to advertise any event on the cars they will have to apply to the council for a grant for that purpose so that the advertising will then be paid for as far as practical purposes are concerned.

According to the monthly report of the light and power department there was an increase in the service of the power department of 13 1/2 horse power, this being a net increase, as there were no services disconnected. Four motors were added to the service.

The light department had 137 services connected during the month against 108 disconnections, making a net gain of 29.

The domestic utilities department reported that 9 electrically heated stoves were disposed, while 2 of these were subsequently disconnected. Out of 66 electric irons disposed of only three were disconnected. A large number of other utilities were reported.

In commenting upon the account recently rendered to the city by the Robbs Manufacturing Company for the engines at the power plant, Supt. MacNaughton in a letter to the commissioners states that the engines make considerably more noise than necessary. Outside of that the engines are giving good service and recommends the payment of the account but thinks that the company should make an attempt to alleviate the noise which is attendant upon their operation.

It is officially announced that the South African Union elections will take place on September 16.

"Just Glancing at Things"

IF there's an ad. in this paper—one of the kind that's repeated—and you are not able to tell what it's about, or what the advertiser is so much in earnest about that he repeats, and repeats, and repeats his message to you—why not, for your own information, just settle down and read it as carefully as though it were a business letter addressed to you!

Then you'll know whether it interests you. Now, you don't.

Nobody gets much real information by "just glancing at things"—especially is this true of advertising. For advertising is such a many-phrased factor of today-life—is woven so carefully into the fabric of today-affairs—that it is something to be understood—to be considered in its significance to you, personally.

"Through the ~~eyes~~ of self esteem ~~the~~ he had looked and riveted with habit the same pain of mind that had squirmed him on that long ago night to the admission she had heard had started to new life a lured, a scathed, a rekindling sin.

"It is all true," he said. It was the inveterate voice of conscience that spoke. "It has been deceiving myself. I was my brother's keeper. ~~Showered blow upon blow on the hard city.~~ I see it now."

She did not catch the deep compunction in the judicial utterance. She stood an instant quivering, then turned and, feeling blindly for the door, swept from the sight.

White and breathless, Jessica climbed the stairs. In her room she took a key from a drawer and ran swiftly to the attic studio. She unlocked the door with hurried fingers, tore the wrappings from the tall white figure of the prodigal son and found a heavy maillet. She lifted this with all her strength and showed it down upon the hard clay, her face and hair and shimmering tress powdered with the white dust, till the statue lay on the floor, a heap of tumbled fragments.

Patience and passionate as the scene in the library had been, her going left a pall of silence in the room. Harry Sanderson looked at David Stires with pale intensity.

"Yet I would have given my life," he said in a low voice, "to save her this!"

Something in the tone caught the old man. He glanced up.

"I never guessed," he said slowly, "I never guessed that you loved her too."

But Harry had not heard. He did not even know that he had spoken aloud.

David Stires turned his wheel chair to the Korean desk, touching the bell as he did so. He took up the draft and put it into his pocket. He pressed a spring; a panel dropped and disclosed a hidden drawer from which he took a crinkling parchment. It was the will against whose signing Harry had pleaded months before in that same room. The butler entered.

"Witness my signature, please," he said and wrote his name on the last page. "Mr. Sanderson will sign with you."

An hour later the fast express that bore Jessica and David Stires was shrieking across the long skeleton railroad bridge, a dotted trail of fire against the deepening night.

Chapter 7

HARRY SANDERSON as he walked slowly back from a long ramble in luncheoners and Norfolk jacket over the hills was not thinking of the sights and sounds of the pleasant evening. He had tramped miles since sundown and had returned as he set out, gloomy, unrequited, a follower of bad quest.

Set back from the street in a wide estate of trees and shrubbery stood a great white porticoed house. Not a light had twinkled from it for nearly a year. The little city had wondered at first, then by degrees had grown indifferent. The secret of that prolonged honeymoon Harry Sanderson and the bishop alone could have told, for the bishop knew of Hugh's criminal act. He was named executor of the will that day in the Korean chair, and David Stires had written the truth. His heart had gone out with pity for Jessica, and understanding. The secret he looked in his own breast, as did Harry Sanderson, each thinking the other ignorant of it.

Since that wedding day no shred of news had come to either. Harry had wished for none. To think of Jessica was a recurrent pang, and yet the very thought of the safe in his study he had formed of the letters of her name! In each memory of her he felt the fresh assault of a new and tireless foe—the love which he must deny.

Outcast and criminal as Hugh was, outcast, who had stolen a bank's money from a woman's love, was still her husband. Hugh's wife! What could she be to him? And this fevered conflict shot through with yet another pang, for the waking smart of compunction which had risen at Jessica's bitter cry, "You helped to make him what he has become!" would not down. That cry had shown him in one clarifying instant the follies and delinquencies of his early career reduplicated as the pariah heretofore, for whom he had never cared a straw. But beneath the surface a great change had come to Harry Sanderson.

"Tonight as he wended his way past the house in the aspens, through the clatter and commotion of the evening, there was a hush of glass over his whole race, a shell of melancholy.

"Tomorrow began Harry's summer vacation, and he had planned a month's peaceful outing through the wide ranch valleys and the farther ranges, and this should set him up again.

Now, however, as he walked along he was bitterly absorbed in thoughts other than his own needs. He passed more than one acquaintance with a stare of recognition. One of these was the bishop, who turned an instant to look after him. The bishop had seen that last night of the old and wondered if it betokened physical illness or mental anguish. More than once he had remembered, with a sigh, the old village of Harry Sanderson's early wilderness. But he knew youth and its lapses, and he liked and respected him. Only two days before, on the second anniversary of Harry's ordination, he had given him for his slitten watch guard a little gold cross engraved with his name and containing the date.

At a crossing the sight of a knot of people on the opposite side of the street awoke Harry from his reverie. They had gathered around a persistent street preacher, who was holding forth in a shrill voice. Beside him on a short pole hung a dripping gas line flare, and the blissing flame lit his bare head, his thin features, his long hair and his long hands made more in vehement gestures. A small maledon on four wheels stood beside him, and on its front was painted in glaring white letters:

HAILLELUJAH JONES.

But no man I may speak, and after that I have spoken much on—Job xxi, 2.

From over the way Harry gazed at the tall, stooping figure pitilessly betrayed by the thin alpaca coat, at the ascetic face burned a brick red from exposure to wind and sun, at the flashing eyes, the impassioned earnestness. He paused at the curb and listened curiously, for Hallelujah Jones with his evangelism mingled a spice of the zeal of the socialist. In his thinking the rich and the wicked were mingled instinctively in the great chastisement. He was preaching now from his favorite text: "Voe to them that are at ease in Zion."

Harry smiled grimly. He had always been "at ease in Zion." He wore sumptuous clothes. The ruby in his ring would bring what this plodding exhorter would call a fortune. At this moment Hiedie, his dapper Finn chauffeur, was polishing the motor car for him to take his cool evening epistle. This afternoon he had put into the little safe in the chapel study $2000 in gold, which he had drawn, part for his charities and quarterly payments and a part to take with him for the expenses of his trip. The street evangelist over there preaching paradise and perdition, as the archangel, retels often needed a square meal and was lucky if he always knew where he would sleep.

The thread of his thought broke. The hunched figure had ended his harangue. The eternal fires were banked for a time, while, seated on a camp stool as he was, he proceeded to transport his audience to the heavenly meads of the New Jerusalem.

Two, three voices of an old fashioned hymn he sang, and after each verse more of the bystanders, some in real earnestness, some in impious hilarity, shouted in the chorus:

"Pains of victory!
Crown of glory!
Pains of victory I shall wear!"

Harry walked on in a brown study, the refrain ringing through his brain. At the chapel gate he lounged his chauffeur waiting orders.

"Bring the car round, Hede," said Harry, "and I shall need you after that tonight. I'll drive her myself. You can meet me at the garage."

The study was pitch dark, and Harry halted on the threshold with a low, ominous growl as Harry fumbled for the electric switch. As he groped and pressed it and the place flooded with light, he saw a figure there, the figure of a man who had been sitting alone, beside the empty hearth, his back shrinking back from the sudden brilliancy.

It was Hugh Stires.

Chapter 8

HARRY SANDERSON stared at the apparition with a strange feeling like rising from the dead. The aristocratic features were ravaged like a nickel blade. Disipation, exposure, shame and unbridled passion had each set its separate seal upon the handsome countenance.

Hugh's clothes were shabby, and the old slinking grace of wearing them was gone. A thin beard covered his chin, and his shifty look, as he turned it first on Harry and then nervously over his shoulder, had in it a hunted dread, a dogging terror, constant and indelible. From had to words had been a swift descent for Hugh Stires.

The wave of feeling ebbed. Harry drew the window curtain, allowing a shade before the light and motioned to the chair.

"Sit down," he said.

Hugh looked his old friend in the face a moment; then his astute glance fell to the white carnation in his lapel and he said, "I suppose you wonder why I have come here."

Harry did not answer the implied question. His scrutiny was deliberate, critical and inquiring.

"What have you been doing the last year?" he asked.

"A little of everything," replied Hugh. "I ran a bucket shop with Monro in Sacramento, for a while. Then I went over in the mining country. I took up a claim at Snake Mountain's worth something or other."

"Why did you leave it?"

Hugh touched his parched lips with his tongue. Again that nervous, slinking look that fearful glance over his shoulder.

"I had no money to work it. I had five. Besides, I'm tired of the whole thing."

The backward glance, the look of dread, were tangible tokens. Harry translated them.

"You are not telling the truth," he said shortly. "What have you done?"

Hugh flinched, but he made sudden answer: "Nothing. What should I have done?"

"That is what I am now inquiring of myself," said Harry. "Your face is a book for any one to read. I see things written on it, Hugh—things that tell story of wrongdoing. You are afraid."

Hugh shivered under the regard. Did his face really tell so much?

"I don't care to be seen in town," he said. "You wouldn't either, probably, under the circumstances." His gaze dropped to his trayed coat sleeve. In his craves fear of something that he dared not name even to himself and in his wretched need he remembered a night once before when he had sailed into town drunken and saluted to a furious room, a refreshing bath, clean linen and a welcome.

"You're the only one in the world I dared come to," he said miserably. "I've walked ten miles today, for I haven't a red cent in my pocket, nor even decent clothes," he ended.

"That can be partly remedied," said Harry after a pause. He took a dark coat from his hook and tossed it to him. "Put that on," he said. "You needn't return it."

Hugh caught the garment. In another moment he had exchanged it for the one he wore and was emptying the old coat's pockets.

Contractors' Attention!

Our new electric floor surface smooths, sandpapers and polishes hard wood and soft wood floors, and does as much as six good men. It's still better on Terraza floors. If you want to repolish an old floor try it with the brushes that go with it and see the wonderful results. Moderate rental per day.

ONE HUNDRED HORSES GONE.

Fox Coulee Man Finds that 104 of His Horses Have Been Stolen.

One hundred and four horses have disappeared from the ranch of Mr. James Trumble, at Fox Coulee, Alberta, and the mounted police have been notified. The loss was not discovered until a week ago, when a round-up was made. Although Mr. Trumble was under contract to supply 300 horses to Mr. Grosse, of Vermilion, and in May he delivered a herd of 325. The remainder were left on the ranch, and the round-up a week ago disclosed the theft.

The surrounding country was searched immediately, but no trace was found.

Mr. Trumble has heard that a number of horses bearing his brand were sold recently by auction at Saskatoon, and in view of the fact that he has disposed of none in that district, he believes that the horses in question are part of those missing. Whether a band of Indians who were in the vicinity of Fox Coulee this summer were responsible or not is to be investigated.

Some Puns.

The best pun in the English language is Tom Hood's. He went and told the sexton, And the sexton told the bell. The word pun is that of the man who fell into a ditch and rose with the remark, "How very ditch-restless."

Dr. Johnson said that the pun was the lowest order of wit, but to this Goldilock replied, "The pun is other words, is the foundation of wit, oh!"

Every Latin master likes to tell his two puns in conversation, viz: "The derivation of a restaurant: 'Res, a thing; taurus, a bull; a bully thing.' The other is an abbreviation of 'Vine, a man; gin, a trap; a man trap.'"

English Humor.

At a recent dinner of the Authors' Club in London Walter Emanuel, member the staff of Punch, pointed out the fact that the man with the largest sense of humor he had ever struck was an Englishman—a dentist. He went to him after suffering long with a toothache. He refused to let him have anything but a dental. The victim groaned: "What's the joke?"

Franklin's Fate Prefigured.

The late Ad Franklin, the explorer, was unwittingly prefigured and on the eve of his starting on his last voyage at the hands of his own devoted wife, who was doing on a sofa Lady Franklin threw something over his head, on which he awoke in consternation, saying: "Why, there's a flag thrown over me! Don't you know that they lay the Union Jack over a corpse?"

When You Have "Pacarded" That Property Long Enough, Advertise it in the Capital

MODERN LIFE WOULD BE TOO HARD ON THE NERVES IF IT WERE NOT FOR WANT ADVERTISING!

The pace of life has become tense.

Worries, disappointments, up-sets at home and office, losses, discouragements seem to multiply as daily life becomes more complex.

The property owner, who MUST have a steady income from rents or loss his property, is "racked" by the untimely defection of a tenant. Some classified advertising quickly retrieves his loss—and quiets his nerves!

The salary earner unexpectedly loses his position—and his peace of mind. The strain would shortly "break" something in his nervous system if, once more, want advertising did not find the better job—and restore to him his mental equilibrium.

In every phase of the city's life, every day, the want ads play the part of the peace-maker. They SERVE you and me at some crisis in our lives—and keep the modern pace and tension from proving too fast and tight for us.

Truly, the want ads ARE FOR SERVICE!

The Weather

Forecast—Manitoba, showers and thunderstorms, Tuesday cool.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Partly fair and cool with local showers.

Since Saturday rains and thunderstorms have been almost general over the prairie provinces, heavy precipitation is reported from some parts of Alberta and there has been nearly an inch of rain at Red Deer and good showers at Calgary and Edmonton.

In Saskatchewan there has been more than an inch of rain at Estevan, over half an inch at Qu'Appelle and heavy showers at Indian Head, Moose Jaw, Regina and Humboldt. Western Manitoba shared in the soaking. Half an inch fell at Manitoba and Brandon.

The links of the Edmonton Golf Club were last week the scene of two close games for the Journal Cup.

In the semi-finals A. P. Chattell and J. M. Hunter opposed one another in a closely contested game. At the 14th green Mr. Chattell was one up and four to play but Mr. Hunter stuck right to his work and succeeded in winning out on the last green by 1 up. His score for the 18 holes was 75.

J. M. Hunter and H. O. Granger met in the finals and it resulted in one of the most keenly contested games ever witnessed on the local links. At the turn they were all square but Mr. Hunter succeeded in winning the match on the last green by one up.

The report in The Daily Capital of this date is not correct in the statement that I had to adjourn my court yesterday afternoon on account of the witnesses not being present. I adjourned because one of the jury being was absent. As the jury was absent from the city on Tuesday, Wednesday and most of Thursday and Corporal Marshall was unable to get the summons signed by me to serve the witnesses with. The second adjournment was made on account of a man being mentioned for the first time during the investigation last evening and I thought: I should have his evidence.

Yours sincerely, A. FORIN, M.D., Coroner.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon in the parlor of Connolly & McKinley the adjourned inquest will be held on the remains of Watt.

been watching for cases where scarlet fever and diphtheria symptoms have appeared together. He intends to report all such cases to the Board of Control in order to impress upon them the fact that the two diseases are often mixed outside as well as inside the hospital. He found two on Saturday.

In the afternoon the contagious diseases ambulance was summoned to a house in Adelaide street west to take away a patient supposed to be suffering with diphtheria. Upon looking at the patient the driver noticed a rash, and recalled the doctor who was in charge. When he came he pronounced it to be scarlet fever instead of diphtheria.

Shortly afterwards the ambulance took a patient supposed to be suffering from diphtheria from St. Clarence avenue to the Isolation Hospital. Before admitting the patient, the house surgeon made an examination, and decided that symptoms of both diphtheria and scarlet fever were present.

SUBPOENAS WERE NOT SIGNED THEN

So Police Were Not to Blame For Not Having Witnesses Ready for Inquest

CORONER'S STATEMENT

Dr. Forin Issues Letter Clearing Mounted Police for Delay in Holding Inquest

In the report of the inquest on the body of Walter Watt, which appeared in the Saturday issue of The Capital, it was stated that, among other reasons, that the inquest was to be adjourned, was on account of the police being unable to procure the necessary witnesses. The inquest was mainly adjourned on account of one of the jury being absent, although the inquest would not have been able to proceed very far without the necessary witnesses. There was some mistake as to the signing of the summons for them and as Dr. Forin, the coroner, the only person who can sign them, was out of town it was impossible for the R. N. W. M. P. to do anything in the matter.

Dr. Forin has issued the following letter clearing the police of all blame: August 13, 1910.

To whom it may concern: The report in The Daily Capital of this date is not correct in the statement that I had to adjourn my court yesterday afternoon on account of the witnesses not being present. I adjourned because one of the jury being was absent. As the jury was absent from the city on Tuesday, Wednesday and most of Thursday and Corporal Marshall was unable to get the summons signed by me to serve the witnesses with. AT THE EMPIRE

The new offering by the popular Sherman Musical Comedy Company at the Empire, starting today at the matinee entitled "A Night at Coney Island," is one of the best musical offerings this company have in their entire list of shows they have to offer to the patrons of the Empire.

"A Night at Coney Island" is a story of an Irishman and a Rube who have come to the beach for the summer and who have also run away from their wives, but on their arrival at the beach find there is more trouble awaiting them there than if they had stayed at home. Every thing to do they lose money on and it is one long scream all the time they are on the stage. Tom Reeson will again play the Irish comedy role and Emil Kraschke will do the rube part.
